

Harvey Relief Fund for Children

Disaster Relief for Children of Rural Texas Extending Our Community to Others in Times of Great Need

Last year our community of Realtor and mortgage professionals, community partners, friends and family came together to provide backpacks and school supplies to kids in need within our community.

Currently, as Hurricane Harvey and its prolonged flooding continues to tear at the heart of Texas, collectively we decided to turn our efforts towards outlining communities cut off from the resources available to the larger cities.

Just outside of Houston, the historic small town of LaGrange (pop. 6000) and other rural communities battle the damage caused by floodwaters that cut them off from the world and rose quickly to the rooftops of many homes and businesses.

We've partnered with a life-long friend and respected founder of a local Austin charity, Random Acts of Love, a registered 501(c)(3), to direct funding for new backpacks and school supplies to the children of these rural communities.
